Keep Bright and You WILL KEEP BUSY

Electric Light is the magnet that draws trade. The bright store is the "hypnotic eye" of business. People can no more resist the attraction of a brilliant, electrically lighted store than they can resist the clarion call of a brass band.

Is your competitor with the Electrically illuminated show windows, bright interior and sparkling Electric Sign getting an advantage over you? The moth never flutters around the unlighted candle! Up-to-date stores nowadays consider shop-window lighting a necessity, whether they remain open after dark or not. Competition forces modern methods.

A show window brilliantly illuminated with Electric light will make many a sale "the night before." Electric light compels attention, makes easy the examination of your display, shows goods in detail and fabrics in their true colors.

And don't neglect the Electric Sign. It is soliciting "tomorrow's" business every moment it is lighted—burning your name in the public mind. It is a solicitor that never becomes weary—never stops work—costs little.

Amusing Sayings Out of the Mouths of Babes.

Mrs. Neighbors—It's too bad of you, Mildred, to worry your mamma so. Little Mildred—Huh, you don't know mamma! She worries me more than I worry her.

Mother—Harold, why did you take your little sister's candy this morning? Small Harold—I don't know, mamma. Perhaps I'm a kleptomaniac.

Little Ethel (looking at picture books)—Elmer, where do you suppose Adam got the names for all the animals? Small Elmer—Why, from the dictionary, of course.

Little Irene—I found a four leaved clover today. That means good luck. Small Elmer—Huh, I found a horse shoe! That means still better luck! Little Irene—How do you know? Small Elmer—Cause I can sell it for 2 cents.

"Here is a picture of a thimble, Emerson," said the Boston teacher. "Now, can you tell me what a thimble is?"

"A thimble," answered small Emerson, "is a diminutive truncated cone, convex on its apex and semiperforated with symmetrical indentations."—Chicago News.

He Approved That Plan. It was said in the Norton family that Uncle Hiram had no ear for music, as he failed to appreciate the vocal efforts of his niece Margaret. But if his ears were defective his pocketbook left nothing to be desired.

"We've been talking over Margaret's voice," said a dauntless and tactful relative who had been delegated to approach Uncle Hiram on the subject.

"It really seems as if she ought to take lessons and practice regularly. Her mother talks of selling a little of her milking stock for Margaret's sake."

"Uncle Hiram's keen old face wore a mutinous expression. 'Have to practice two, three hours a day, I suppose?' he said dully.

"Oh, yes," said the venturesome relative; then she had a sudden inspiration. "It would be best of all if she could go abroad for two or three years," she murmured thoughtfully, "but of course that is out of the question—the expense!"

"Never you mind about the expense!" broke in Uncle Hiram joyfully. "If she can go abroad—a good long way abroad—to take her lessons and do her practicing, I'll foot the expense."—Youth's Companion.

At the Minstrel Show. "Mistah Bones," began the corpulent end man as he twirled his tambourine, "my old father always told me to make money like hot cakes and the world would respect me."

"Hot cakes ain't too slow," yawned Mr. Bones. "If you wants de world to respect you dese days you hab to make money lak bananas."

"Lak bananas! How am dat?"

"In bunches, Mistah Tambo, in bunches."—Chicago News.

Greasier Joe's Place. You kin brag of city cafes and their trout from streams and lakes. Of their meals served in a carty and their muskrooms and their rice.

But the grub at Greasier Joe's is the finest ever dealt. Come, homber, and jest tuck a bowl of chile 'neath your belt!

The music's kind of skimpy, and it don't go very far. It's dealt out by a half breed and a mighty bad guitar.

But old Joe is a winner when it comes to mix'n' dope. And the first small of his chile 'd give a dyin' hoss thief hope.

There is sometimes rough stunts dot'n and p'rase some powder burnt. For the men who eat at Joe's all the p'light was ain't learnt.

But good food is like to most things that are scarce and hard to get—It's worth some risk in tradin' and a-makin' yours, you bet!

So jest come with me to Joe's, where there ain't no menu stant. Where the tablecloths is minus and a napkin is an affront.

And you'll get a bowl of chile that'll warm you through and through. So come with me to Joe's, jes' tanderfoot—yes, you!

WHAT BLISS!

On Christmas night, Oh, what delight, When stars are brightly gleaming, And snows are piled And breezes wild, And love, young love, is dreaming!

What bliss, I say, With pa's old sleigh And robes all warm and furry, And Dobbin, dear, Who has no fear, That he will have to hurry!

And then—oh, well, If I must tell! Your own-y, ownest girlie, And later on, All tucked in good, And warned to "come home early."

What bliss, I say, To ride away, With bells just faintly jingling, And later on, When love has won, Our chilly fingers mingling!

And then—at last—Hearts beating fast, In love's delightful tether, Lips slowly steal, And then—why—freeze together.

No Doubt. "I was counsel for a railway company in the west," says a prominent New York lawyer, "in whose employ a section hand had been killed by an express train. His widow of course sued for damages. The principal witness swore positively that the locomotive whistle had not sounded until after the entire train had passed over the departed friend."

"You admit that the whistle blew?" "I sternly demanded of the witness. 'Oh, yes; it blew!'"

"Now," I added impressively, "if that whistle sounded in time to give Morgan warning the fact would be in favor of the company, wouldn't it?"

"I suppose so," said the witness. "Very well. Now, for what earthly purpose would the engineer blow his whistle after the man had been struck?"

"I presume," replied the witness, with great deliberation, "that the whistle was for the next man on the track."—Harper's Weekly.

Got His Answer. The victim of the dentist held up his hand.

"Doctor," said he, "before you put the lid on my conversation will you answer a question?"

"Yes," said the dentist, selecting a square piece of rubber and snipping it with his scissors.

"Do people chew more on one side of the mouth than the other?"

"Sure," said the dentist, picking up the clamps. "How interesting! Which side?"

"The inside," replied the dentist, slipping the rubber dam over the verbal one that issued from his patient's lips.—Lippincott's.

Her Stipulation. When a rosy cheeked, good natured Irish girl fresh from the other side recently sought employment in the service of a Germantown woman the latter began anxiously to interrogate the girl as to her qualifications.

"Can you cook, Nora?" asked the lady most earnestly. "Are you a good cook?"

"Yes, mum; I 'fink so," responded the girl naively, "if ye'll not try to help me."—Harper's Weekly.

Forewarned. "Yes," said Hi Tragedy, with a smile, "I remember my parents used to say I'd never amount to anything if I didn't give up my theatrical aspirations."

"Well, that was fair warning," remarked Crittick. "Why didn't you profit by it?"—Philadelphia Press.

"No. Each has learned to go on reading a newspaper while the other is talking without being in the least disturbed."—Washington Star.
